Hi Again,

When you arrive at the EPA Security desk tomorrow, please ask them to call Madison McGovern on my team at (202) 564-5857. Also because we only have one hour, we crafted a brief agenda to help guide the discussion.

Thanks,

Tina

Agenda NAMC-IRIS Meeting May 16, 2019 @11 AM

EPA Ronald Reagan Building, Washington, DC

- Introductions (All)
- Presentation of concerns (NAMC)
- Clarifying discussion (IRIS-NAMC)
- Closing/next steps (IRIS)

Subject: RE: NAMC - May 16 Meeting to Discuss IRIS Website Proposal

Tina:

I think the easiest way to provide more details on our proposal is to give an example. Let's say a stakeholder is interested in molybdenum. That person goes to the IRIS assessment website and searches for molybdenum.

	Chemical Name	CASRN	Last Significant Revision*	IRIS Summary	Tox Review/ Support Document
377	Molybdenum	7439-98-7	Nov-01-1992	 (PDF 11 pp, 106 K)	Not Available

While we appreciate that there is information on the last significant revision for the assessment on this page, we believe that many stakeholders will not take notice and instead, will click immediately on the "molybdenum" link under chemicals name or on the IRIS summary document. .

To ensure information on the timing of the assessment is clearly communicated, we propose that another notification be given to the stakeholder when he or she clicks on the IRIS summary or the "molybdenum" link. In our view, this notification would be a simply text box that pops up on the screen reminding the user of the age of the assessment. Potential wording would be as follows:

NOTE: You are accessing an IRIS assessment document that is more than ten years old.

It is possible that additional data on this chemical are now available which were not included as part of the IRIS assessment.

Users are encouraged to consider investigating whether more recent data are available and if so, whether they are relevant for their needs.

Click OK to continue

I hope this helps.

Hi Kathleen,

Just checking to see if you will be sharing an overview of NAMC's issues/proposal with us in advance of the meeting on Thursday? It might help us prepare for a better conversation?

Thanks,

Tina

Thank you Ligia. We also look forward to meeting with your group. For your awareness, the IRIS program posts information about stakeholder meetings, attendees, shared materials, and notes on its website:
